

Environmental and Occupational Health

Environmental and Occupational Health professionals focus on how and why environmental and occupational factors impact human health. These professionals work on a variety of issues such as sustainability, climate change, workforce safety, and food security often impacting trends in environmental policy, workplace standards and program management. Their responsibilities range from providing support in danger zones, to conducting research in the field to managing programs in an office setting. The average annual salary is $60,000.

Sample Occupations

- Emergency Manager
- Consultant
- Program Coordinator
- Industrial Hygienist
- Research Associate

Sample Work Settings

- State Government
- Federal Government
- Consulting Firms
- Non-Profits
- For Profit Organizations

Potential Employers

American
Red Cross

Booz | Allen | Hamilton

Job Search Sites and Resources

- <http://careers.apha.org/jobs>
- Usajobs.gov
- Gogovernment.org
- Opajobs.org
- Handshake
- Passport Careers

Professional Organizations

- American Public Health Association
- National Association of City and County Health Officials
- Associations of State and Territorial Health Officials
- National Environmental Health