GW Milken Institute School of Public Health in partnership with GWSPH’s Diversity, Equity & Inclusion Task Force would like to share news about the next seminar in the Dean’s Seminar Series: Why is Maternal and Infant Mortality Still a Public Health Problem in the U.S.?

This session will highlight The GW Maternal and Child Health Center as a Center of Excellence, discuss an interdisciplinary research leaders project on Fathers as Powerful Agents of Change in Reducing Disparities in Maternal Mortality in the District of Columbia, and raise awareness of pressing issues pertaining to maternal mortality, infant mortality and maternal child health. Why does infant mortality continue to be one of our greatest public health challenges in the U.S.? Where do we go from here? Resident faculty experts discussing this topic include:

- Y. Tony Yang, ScD, LLM, MPH, Exe. Director, Center for Health Policy and Media Engagement, Tenured Professor, GW School of Nursing and GW Milken Institute School of Public Health
- Sherrie Flynt Wallington, PhD, Assistant Professor, Health Disparities and Oncology, GW School of Nursing and GW Cancer Center
- Amita N. Vyas, PhD, MHS, Associate Professor, Director, Maternal & Child Health Program, GW Milken Institute School of Public Health
- Karen A McDonnell, PhD, Associate Professor, Department of Prevention and Community Health, GW Milken Institute School of Public Health
